5th Annual Advanced Issues in Special Education Law

“Exceptional Day. Best workshop I have attended.” (2007)

“The various presentations had a great deal of relevance to the day-to-day issues Boards of Education are facing.” (2005)

“This course provided an excellent overview of the current legislation and its implications...an extremely beneficial and informative day.” (2006)

Today’s education system is more challenging than ever before and a greater number of students have special needs that require supports beyond those ordinarily received in the school setting. In order to ensure the learning environment and safety of all students and staff is not compromised, it is essential that those working in special education, whether it be developing or administering policy, or on the front lines, have a complete and current understanding of the law and how to apply it.

This Osgoode Professional Development program, 5th Annual Advanced Issues in Special Education Law, was developed to provide you with the opportunity to get a practical, up-to-date understanding of the most pertinent legal challenges in special education today and give you strategies to deal with them. Your failure to understand these responsibilities can have serious and potentially costly ramifications for not only yourself, but also the school board, students, and staff. You’ll take away information that can be readily implemented in your workplace whether it be a school, board, law firm or other educational institution.

Plus! Don’t miss the optional workshop: Facilitation Skills for Education Professionals, on June 1st, 2010. Given recent legislative reforms and the implications of Board protocols, this limited-enrolment workshop is a MUST attend. Working with your peers and workshop leaders, you will learn:

- How to prevent and handle conflict
- Collaborative approaches to resolving conflicts
- Tips for reaching a “shared solution”
- The rules and responsibilities with special education

No matter what your role in education, you undoubtedly spend a great deal of time managing conflicts. This workshop is your chance to work with top practitioners and hone your skills when handling disputes.

Louise Moreau, Superintendent of Education and Special Education, York Region District School Board

Nadya Tymochenko, Keel Cottrelle LLP

Dr. Lindy Zaretsky, Superintendent of Instructional Services and Leadership, Simcoe County District School Board

This interactive session will provide an opportunity for you to work with a fact scenario, based on a real life example, highlighting the legal issues that have been raised by presenters throughout the day. Mr. Keel will moderate questions for members of the panel and will solicit commentary and questions from the course participants. You'll be part of a lively and informative discussion with top practitioners and other education professionals as the group tackles the tough issues raised in the scenario.

This is your opportunity to apply what you have learned and get the questions you want answered in order to effectively respond and manage special education matters in the school and classroom.

4:00 Course Concludes

What Past Participants Have Said:

"Well-organized, clear, concise and useful information...your speakers' passion for the subjects covered was consistent and obvious" (2009)

"I appreciate hearing the legal view on procedures and policies in education. Well done!" (2008)

"Excellent source of information presented in an extremely relevant, charismatic manner." (2008)

"[This] is a minefield for Principals...this conference has been wonderful. Many questions addressed – even when there are no clear answers. Thank you." (2006)

"A very thorough 'legal grounding' to consider as we work through daily issues and events." (2006)
