Med-Arb: Efficiency or Justice Compromised?

As a new and developing method of dispute resolution, Mediation-Arbitration is likely to play an expanded role in our justice system, requiring a special skill set and raising unique challenges for all those involved.

Developed as part of a unique partnership, this joint ADRIO/FDRIO/OsgoodePD program will provide a forum for discussion focusing on broadening the skills of those currently working in med-arb while also providing a wealth of information for those contemplating a career in med-arb or who simply work in dispute resolution and need a grounding of the concepts.

This is a unique gathering of experienced practitioners who will discuss the expanding role of med-arb in family law, commercial matters, contracts, banking, labour, real estate, etc. Ensure you are informed and equipped and don't miss this event.

Who Should Attend?

- Mediators
- Arbitrators
- ADR Professionals
- Human Resources Professionals
- Anyone who deals with dispute resolution issues
- Lawyers who practice in: family, civil litigation, labour/employment, bankruptcy/insolvency, commercial, wills/estates
- Financial professionals including valuers, actuaries, forensic accountants
- Government Employees

What is The Future of Med-Arb?

Moderator:

Lorne H. Wolfson, Torkin Manes LLP

Panelists:

Philip M. Epstein, QC, Epstein Cole LLP

Ian M. Hull, Hull & Hull LLP

David McCutcheon, C. Arb., Dentons Canada LLP

In this crystal ball session, three experienced practitioners will boldly predict the future of Med-Arb. They will:

- Examine the present trend to confine med-arb to specialized practice areas such as family law and estates
- Review the legal boundaries of med-arb practice including the value of med-arb agreements and potential liabilities for med-arb practitioners
- Identify probable dispute area expansion into commercial and construction practices
- Discuss the real and perceived barriers to the future use of med-arb including
 - the lack of well-trained practitioners
 - distrust of the med-arb process

- the failure of med-arb agreements to protect practitioners against bias claims
- the restrictive scope of mediation practices to avoid bias claims
- the failure of the Court's reluctance to recognize med-arb practices and set appropriate limits on the mediator's toolbox

Ethical Issues in the Professional Practice of Med-Arb

Moderator:

Elaine Newman, BA, LLB, LLM, Mediator and Arbitrator

Panelists:

Carol W. Hickman, QC, BA, LLB, West Coast ADR Law Group

Richard W. Shields, C. Arb., C. Med. Cert. F.Arb., Cert. F. Med, Lawyer Mediator Trainer

Professor Martha E. Simmons, Director, Mediation Clinical Program, Osgoode Hall Law School, York University

In med-arb, practitioners face the extraordinary challenge of maintaining neutrality while exercising evaluation and judgement. It is a minefield of ethical issues. In order to navigate the route safely, it is necessary to identify the issues, and to develop keen awareness of them. Then, it is critical to face them transparently and thoughtfully.

This panel will identify the ethical issues and discuss best practices in addressing them, including:

- How do mediation values conflict with arbitration values?
 - Self-determination vs fairness and justice?
 - Power balance vs adversarial advocacy?
- Problems of confidentiality in med-arb and how to address them
- Truth telling and determinations of credibility
- What do Codes of Conduct seek to do? To what extent do they achieve their goals?
- Conducting med-arb for the vulnerable client

Cheryl Goldhart, Goldhart & Associates

Safina Lakhani, Crawley MacKewn Brush LLP

Alexa Sulzenko, Filion Wakely Thorup Angeletti LLP

In considering how the role of the advocate changes in med-arb, this panel will consider the following key issues:

- How to prepare your client and yourself
- Preparing the mediation brief
- Problem solving advocacy
- Anticipating potential problems
- Using the mediator
- How to document the settlement
- Using the failed settlement
