3RD NATIONAL SYMPOSIUM ON Mental Disorder: Criminal Justice and Community Solutions

From the challenges facing police when dealing with mentally ill persons, through the criminal process, the use of the not criminally responsible defence, to trending issues before the courts and Review Boards, this ground-breaking OsgoodePD program will probe the crossroads of mental health and criminal justice and how community solutions can offer more suitable alternatives to incarceration. A truly expert faculty from Canada and the U.S., with representation from the judiciary, Review Board, mental health community support organizations, legal profession, policing, academia and the field of psychiatry will explore the essential and emerging issues, including:

- Practical tools and approaches that can help provide pathways away from and out of the criminal justice system for persons with mental health issues
- Jurisdictional and procedural issues as well as general strategies to consider when the NCR defence may be at play
- Lessons learned from the 2017 study of the Ontario Review Board process
- Some innovative international approaches to therapeutic justice

Who Should Attend?

Lawyers, Judges, Review Board members, law enforcement professionals, mental health court and community support workers, psychiatrists, forensic psychologists, social workers
